FABER & FABER

Hello young reader . . . !

Thanks for taking the time,
In selecting my book of ridiculous rhyme.
I'm Gavin, (you'll find my full name on the cover)

The teller of tales, which you're soon to discover.

It's taken me years to unearth these strange fables,
By visiting farmyards and hanging round
stables

– And this is a series with just a selection, of some of the weirdest in my collection.

They're all about horses –
each one of them true,
And it's such a nice privilege to share
them with you!

Well, when I say “True,” I mean . . .
that's what I've heard.

(It's hard to believe, since they're all so absurd!)

So, instead of returning this book to the shelf,

Why not read on and decide for yourself?

On a warm summer's day at a race track in Surrey, Something odd happened to a racehorse called Murray.
The events that unfolded were certainly strange,
Events that by chance caused his whole life to change.

Murray decided – as a young foal –
To make championship-racing
his ultimate goal.

He dreamed of success,
of riches and
fame;
Dreamed fans the world over would cheer
out his name.

He came from a family of true
sporting glory,
Where triumph and praise was a regular story.

His parents won trophies and medals galore
And hoped beyond hope that their son would win more.

But despite Murray's plans to reach stardom some day,
There was one major problem
that stood in his way.

A difficult hurdle he couldn't get past . . .
Murray the horse wasn't that fast!

He trained as often as any horse could,
But this dutiful racehorse just wasn't that good.

His trainer once dubbed him,

'A racing disaster!'

Claiming that 'jockeys could even run faster!'
